Now in its sixth season, Camp Firewood is a four-day-long, 29-year-old camp of single moms, long-term caregivers, snotty 5-year-olds and pre-adolescent cougars hosted by your pals Kevin Allison and Marty Becker, who are former English teachers. A tall, skinny guy with a mischievous smile and a classic wardrobe of oversize T-shirts and rubber gloves, Kevin is the voice of the campfire and the Ernie of the group. He plays a mean tuba and is the campmaster. Marty, a good-looking with a goatee and twinkly eyes and a voice that morphs from high-pitched to a deep rumble, is the campfire's sidekick and is the campadept at campfire crafting, using scraps of twigs and string to create fanciful, homemade sculpture. He is also an occasional teacher of the campfire, including one day on How to Make a Map of Your Body. The show's favorite child and biggest heartthrob is Peggy Hillman, a 5-year-old boy who loves Chinese food, is a member of the Junior Firemen and occasionally makes "shortcakes" that include chocolate chips, walnuts and chocolate frosting. When he isn't making a mess in the kitchen, he usually is making a mess on stage. Camp Firewood airs at 9 p.m. Sunday on CNN. UNPUBLISHED UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS

Oct 2, 2007 As for Cyrillic to Latin, there are two free converters: the one by Nebojša Vučinić and the one by puz.kattid, both of which are useful and have a good interface. I found I could edit them in Stata, but I wouldn't know how to use them for much other work. If you do any scholarly work, such as translation, you'll want to know Cyrillic, as well as Latin. To learn Cyrillic, look for some resources that teach the alphabet. Many such courses show the various letter shapes and then teach you how to write them. For example, this website has lesson and review sections, along with video tutorials and practice lessons. You might look at this website more than any other. There are several sites that offer printable versions of the alphabet. One such site is this one. Note, however, that these are not suitable for printing out because they are printed in reverse. To learn the alphabet, you can also read print books. Some of them teach the Greek alphabet (the alphabet we use now), which is basically the Cyrillic alphabet with a few differences, such as the addition of the letter "Й" to represent "I". I suggest you read The Elements of Typographic Style by Robert Bringhurst and also a book called The Elements of Typographic Style Revised and Updated. Finally, you can spend a month or so learning the Cyrillic alphabet and then try writing something with it. If you learn a few basic phrases and words, you can also read through some of the many books available on Russian. It's a challenge to read, but the payoff is worth the effort.
