In this paper we report a novel type of cholinergic agonist, called babau, which was found in the plant Oxetia sp., and studied its properties. The acetylcholine (ACh) release effect of babau was detected by using membrane preparations of Drosophila, as an in vitro model. The effect of babau could be distinguished from that of well known cholinergic compounds such as carbachol. In the calcium independent binding assay, babau specifically and potently displaced <sup>3</sup>H[α]-methyloligol benzilate (α-BIBX) from the muscarinic M2 receptor, whereas carbachol (CCh), acetylcholine (ACh), and nicotine displaced the ligand from M1 receptors. However, in contrast to the results from M1 and M2 receptors, babau did not modulate M4 receptors. The babau-induced ACh release was further verified in an in vivo assay using mouse ileum. It is concluded that babau is a new type of cholinergic agonist. The ACh release effect of babau was assumed to be mediated by M2 receptors. Agriculture Supernatural Forces after Armageddon: A new book published by The Institute for the Study of Religion, Politics and Culture, North Carolina State University has surveyed the present threats and future possibilities for mankind after the hypothetical end of civilization. The Supernatural Forces After Armageddon: How Religious Beliefs Impact the Onset and End of Civilization is the collaborative effort of co-authors William Sims Bainbridge, Daniel C. Denzler, and Richard C. Retan. The group examined the presence of various supernatural beings and activities among various groups of people in different parts of the world and suggests that a modern world ruled by "shadowy others" could be our last hope for the survival of mankind. "Will Earth face its own version of Armageddon? Or will humankind be spared the angst of Judgment Day? To survive, we'll need to make some big changes, including enhancing our group cohesion, improving our education and training to be more adaptable and resilient. But how can we
